Not yet. NMED has not given the clearance yet.

Not that I'm aware of. I asked CDPHE to let me know what they hear, but they have not asked Durango to report this info to them so they may not know exactly when this happens. Have any NM systems started using their intakes?

Sara,

The article is from last night. Have things changed this morning?

Sara,

Do you know if Durango opened their intakes?

Hi – just one clarification for the S Ute. They were not impacted for DW, but do use the Animas for ag purposes. That's likely why they came up.

Thanks!

Kevin,

R6 Tribal drinking water systems have not been impacted by the mine spill. The drinking water systems located far away from the river.

Thank you.

Gold King Mine Response Regions,

Please see question below - when you get the chance, please send me a couple of bullets on water issues associated with Tribes for this response.\

If you prefer, I will just extract something from the SitReps.

Thanks,

Subject: Water desk question

Kevin,

Are there any drinking water issues associated with the tribes affected by the release? (I think the Navajo and the Southern Ute tribes were affected) We have the Tribal Lands Environmental Forum next week and I want to be sure Becki Clark has some background information in case someone asks.
